When I tell people I volunteer at Fernside, a Center for Grieving Children, the typical reaction is “How can you do that? It must be so sad. I couldn’t handle that!”

So why do I do it?

My mother died when I was 22, my father when I was 37 and my first husband when I was 49. During my husband’s illness I sought out a counselor. I talked. I felt comfortable with her. I could say anything that was on my mind without feeling guilty, selfish, emotional, weak – any negative emotion you might name. After my husband’s death I attended a grief support group at a local church. I still remember arriving at the parking lot and hesitating to walk in because I didn’t want to talk about being a “widow.” But I did go in and I did talk and I listened. I was encouraged by the people who had been going through the grieving experience longer than I. I felt great hope.

We at Fernside encourage the children and adults to talk. It might be through guided imagery, play acting, art, peer interviews, games or pretend funerals. The way the participants communicate is not important – it is that they feel comfortable coming to Fernside. They are with people who are also feeling pain. They discover they are not alone. If they choose not to talk, they listen. I worked with 4-5th grade children for two years and I’m in my third year with the preteens. We know that most preteens find sharing difficult. My co-facilitator Barb Henry and I have some pretty neat ways to get the preteens to share!

We had one boy who was with us for over a year. Initially he was quite despondent and did not participate. A faithful aunt brought him every week and the progress was amazing. He slowly began to share his feelings and was quite helpful in talking with new youth about his progress since the death. He kept fond memories of his mother in his heart but he grew to understand that life goes on and that pain lessens with time.

Is it sad? Yes. Is it difficult? Sometimes. Why do I continue? Because I know that these young children who walk through the Fernside door week after week need loving, understanding people who are “there for them.” They need each other. Sit just one evening in the wrap-up session and hear the stories, the concerns and the victories to know that we are needed and that the youth are responding. The foundation of the volunteers is the dedicated staff at Fernside who fill the gaps and keep the whole program working.

Rachel Burrell was a wise woman to have seen the need for a place like Fernside.

A Twist on Twister
Two Fernside facilitators recently came up with a great new group activity. Cindy Stiens and Laura Baum facilitate 10, 11 and 12 year olds on our Extended Loss night. This is the night when kids who have experienced the death of an extended family member (grandparent, aunt, uncle, cousin or friend) attend support groups. Cindy and Laura decided to adapt the popular Twister game for use in their group. After a death in our family we experience many changes, both in our lives and within ourselves. Cindy and Laura came up with questions that addressed changes and as each group member took their turn spinning, they had to answer the question as well as twist their body on the game mat. Some of the questions were Can change be good? If you could change something about a loved one, what would it be? What does change mean to you?

When asked, “What would you change about yourself?” one group member responded, “I wish I was nicer to my family.” Thanks to the creativity of volunteers like Cindy and Laura, kids at Fernside can learn to talk about a death and the changes it brings while having fun too.

Thursday Extended Loss Group
East End Heritage School Group
The week of April 16th marks the annual National Volunteer Week celebration. Volunteers are recognized for all the time and effort they contribute to countless programs across the country. As Fernside marks its 20th anniversary this year, we acknowledge and honor the hundreds of volunteers who have been an integral part of our service to the community. Thank you!

The Hospice Summertime Classic is scheduled for June 4th and 5th at the Hyde Park Golf and Country Club. This annual event supports programming at Fernside. Volunteers are needed for both days. Please contact Erin Walker at the Bethesda Foundation if you would like to help. She can be reached at (513) 745-1613 or at Erin_Walker@trihealth.com.

Fernside’s summer camp program, Camp WeBelong, takes place this August. Planning for the camp is underway now. Facilitators should contact Mary if they are interested in volunteering as camp counselors.

This space is devoted to the writings, drawings and quotes of Fernside children and adults who are grieving the death of someone close.

Join Us for Opening Day Parade

What do Fernside and the Cincinnati Reds have in common? The 87th annual Findlay Market Opening Day Parade! This marks the 20th year that Fernside has been offering grief support services to children and families in the Greater Cincinnati area. In recognition and celebration of all of the individuals, organizations and donors who have made this possible, we will be creating a float to thank the community for all of their support and to continue to heighten awareness of children’s grief issues. Please come out and cheer us on!
